

Usability Test – Tom 8 years old

Tom was explained what the prototype is and what it should do. Because of the language barrier I helped with translating the english into german.

Steps to follow:

1. Simulate a Registration

- Likes the picture
- Info texts (Data Policy etc.) are too long (and boring)

2. Simulate the log in

- Understands the log in
- Likes the button color (purple)

3. Navigate to the profile page

- Found the button and could use it
- Did not like the visual of the profile button (not colorful enough, „white is boring“)

4. Navigate to and open a group

- Could navigate tot he group and open it easily
- Did not like the pink color scheme
- Found the Group page to complicated (confusing)

5. Vote in a group

- Had problems finding the vote without reading the text
- Liked the polar lights gif in the voting
- Understood how to vote

6. Open a group chat

- Needed help opening the chat (three point symbol is not intuitive enough! We need to change that!)
- Liked the profile pictures in the group chat

7. Open your friendlist

- Found the button
- He could open the list with no problem
- Mentioned he was afraid to mistakenly click on „unfriend“ when starting a chat

8. Navigate to the profile page of a friend

- Needed help to navigate to the profile page of a friend (too complicated to go into the chat first and then click on the name)
- Liked that Julie (Mock up friend page) also likes soccer (same as him)

9. Open a private chat between friends

- Found the chat
- Liked the chat
- Thinks he would use the report functionality if necessary

10. Open the settings and navigate through the different settings categories

- Likes the picture of the jelly fish (talks about a visit to a aquarium last year)
- Log out button is hidden too much in the settings. (He would like it on the home page /start page -> after asking him for a better place in his opinion)
- FAQ's is a lot to read

11. Log out

- Too hard to find in the settings (as seen above)

12. Delete your profile in the prototype

- Button too dark (color)
- Too much pop ups to make sure the deletion is not a mistake (too complicated for him)
